Don’t burden yourself with out-of-date-information from the last century!

What your mother didn’t tell you about skincare (She didn't mean any harm; she just didn't know better!)

Our author Vicky (32) found skincare rather tedious until her last birthday. The beauty routines of her friends seemed too time-consuming with their hours-long applications.

What she has now discovered, means she doesn't have to use 35 different creams, balms, and masks to enjoy youthful skin, and neither do you!

Written by Vicky, freelance writer - who has recently delved deeply into skincare and aging and found the perfect solution for wrinkle-free aging without much effort.

Skincare was never a big deal for me. I’ve always finish faster in the bathroom than my partner. (This works great for me, as I love efficiency.) This year, however, I turned 32 and saw my first wrinkles.

The worst part? My loving boyfriend brought it to my attention.

After giving me an anti-wrinkle cream, (he has more skincare products than I do), I started looking closely at my skin and as always, I thought; “Time to dive into the topic of skin aging.”

And with that thought in mind, I got to work.

To start with, I’m not a fan of lengthy skincare routines.

I have friends who use over 35 creams, balms, and masks throughout the week to make their skin look great - that’s definitely too much for me.

I believe our skincare routines are heavily influenced by what we learn about skincare from our mothers, friends, magazines, and social media.

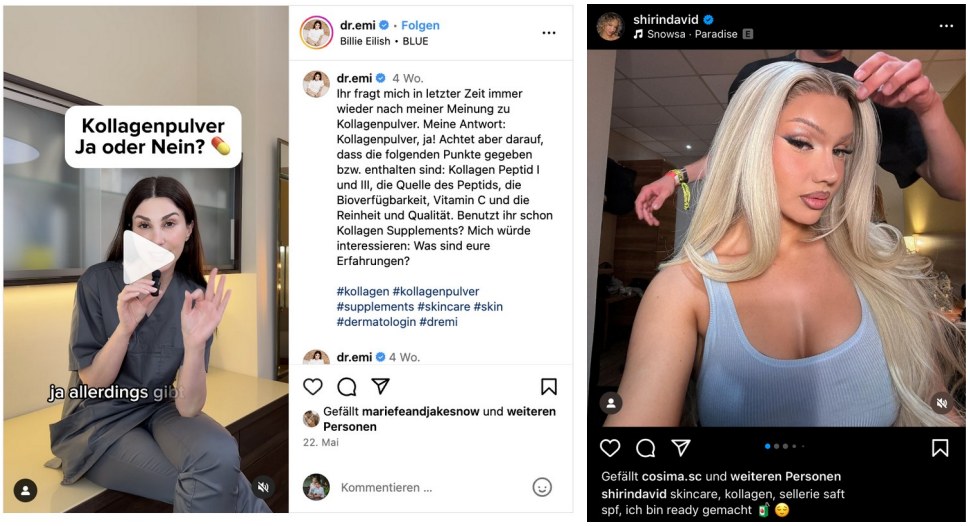

And mine definitely were from my mother - she never had more than an all-purpose moisturiser on the bathroom shelf.

Don’t get me wrong - I love my mother. She did everything to ensure our family never lacked anything. However, there just wasn't much time left for elaborate skincare routines.

So, skincare was always a last priority for her. And the same was true for me.

As I dove into my extensive research on skin aging, I began seeing a pattern, especially content on social media, all praising collagen.

Besides significant influencers like Dr. Emi or Shirin David repeatedly mentioning that collagen is part of their daily routine, I was impressed by the scientific approach to collagen. According to current science, there are no good or bad genes when it comes to skin aging. (Phew, lucky me! 😀)

Unfortunately, there’s a lot of outdated education and information still circulating regarding your skin health.

But collagen seemed to keep coming up as best thing for your skin.

What I found in my research made me incredibly happy, and you might be just as thrilled when you read how much time you can save with collagen and, even more exciting, how outstanding the results were from my self-test!

First, the hard facts: Collagen is the main protein in our skin responsible for its firmness and elasticity. As we age, natural collagen production decreases, leading to wrinkles and sagging skin. Thanks to current science, we now know that taking collagen can significantly slow these effects down. All those creams and cosmetics you have, only scratch the surface.

Instead of a 3-hour daily beauty routine, you can invest just 5 minutes in the morning to have collagen, which strengthens your skin from the inside - more on that shortly. 🙂

When you start looking for a good collagen product, a jungle of providers opens up. How do you choose the right one?

There are so many powders, creams, supplements, etc that all promote collagen.

But, during a recent visit to a friend in Berlin, this decision was quickly made for me: On a small shopping trip, I noticed a pop-up-store from Glow25.

See, what had previously deterred me from buying collagen powder was the potential smell and taste. Most supplements or powders don’t actually taste good.

I was therefore very delighted by the free test of Glow Coffee at Glow25.

In addition to all the great health benefits and market-leading quality features, what matters to me is that taking it is super easy and doesn’t take more than 5 minutes: Whether in coffee or cocoa, the powder completely dissolves and is tasteless.

And let’s stick to facts: From the age of 30, a woman's body starts producing less collagen every year. So, if you don’t want to age - inside and out - you need to supplement your collagen.

What's the most effective alternative to collagen supplements? Bone broth.

Yep, you can get fresh bones from your butcher every day and make a bone broth to last you all week. But honestly? This might work for most people but I don't like to drink the gelatinous collagen at lunch with my coworkers.

Apart from the time it takes, which is less than 5 minutes, Glow25's powder is also optimally prepared for the body, so unlike many other supplements, the peptides are made to be absorbed, and not just excreted. Glow25 has ensured the powder is so fine that it's absorbed directly through into the bloodstream and doesn't leave the body unfinished.

I've already reordered collagen from Glow25 twice as I love it so much.

Since I know that Glow25's collagen powder not only makes the skin glow with youthful radiance but also strengthens joints and alleviates joint pain, I ordered a 3-month pack for my mom too. Even though she might not have taught me much about skin care, I'm grateful for all the other skills she taught me and wanted to give something back. And she's just as enthusiastic as I am!

For her, it's also great because she's starting to have joint pain at 54, due to working a lot with her hands, and she told me these pains have completely disappeared over the last month!

If you've been considering adding collagen to your daily routine, I personally recommend Glow25.

With collagen:

- Your skin glows from the inside and out - leaving your body feeling stronger, and more youthful than it has in a while.
- Your body maintains one of the most important structural proteins at levels usually produced in youth.
- It strengthens your hair - no more pulling out clumps when in the shower.
- Wrinkles are counteracted or slowed right down.
- In many cases, cellulite decreases.
- Healthy joints are improved and painful joints feel less painful.

And the coolest part: Glow25 has a special offer right now!
